

TOP RE-ENROLLMENT MISPERCEPTIONS

Re-enrollment may help put participants on the path to better retirement outcomes, but some common MISPERCEPTIONS could be preventing plan sponsors from leveraging this strategy.

WHAT'S HOLDING PLAN SPONSORS BACK?

1 "If I conduct a re-enrollment, my participants will push back."

Participants say they need help.

2 "A re-enrollment is too much of a fiduciary risk."

ERISA safe harbor protection may be available for assets re-enrolled into a QDIA.

A CLOSER LOOK AT THE SAFE HARBOR

QDIA regulation provides that safe harbor protection may be available when "the participant . . . had the opportunity to direct the investment of the assets in his or her account but did not direct the investment of the assets."

DID YOU KNOW?

A plan re-enrollment is a process by which participants are notified that their existing assets and future contributions will be invested in the plan's qualified default investment alternative (QDIA), which may be a target date fund based on their date of birth. All participants' assets are automatically moved into the QDIA on a certain date unless the participant makes a new investment election during a specified time period.

Before conducting a re-enrollment, a plan sponsor must engage in a prudent process for determining whether a re-enrollment is appropriate for the plan and its participants.

PARTICIPANT BENEFITS

- Potential for improved asset allocation
- Helps new and existing participants

PLAN SPONSOR BENEFITS

- Potential for protection from investing liability
- Better participant experience

TARGET DATE FUNDS. Target date funds are funds with the target date being the approximate date when investors plan to start withdrawing their money. Generally, the asset allocation of each fund will change on an annual basis with the asset allocation becoming more conservative as the fund nears the target retirement date. The principal value of the fund(s) is not guaranteed at any time, including at the target date.
